1. The Military-Naval Academy in Gruz opened on 1 November 1949 as an advanced institute for graduates of the Military-Naval School. The course of instruction is patterned after the training given Yugoslav naval officers in the Soviet Union prior to the Tito-Cominform split, with special emphasis on practical application. Director for political instruction is Major Milorad Milijanovic, and Captain Stanko Parmec supervises the staff of professors.
2. The instructors are not fully qualified for their posts because of their own lack of training. Lectures are based on translations from foreign naval training manuals [redacted] and works describing naval experiences of the Allies and Yugoslavia during World War II.
